Macha leads in sanitation drive

A Programme anchored at the district level, the National Rural Sanitation Programme (NRSP), aims to provide toilets to all rural households. This is evident in the story of Macha, a village in the district.

Macha, a village of 1,200 people, has made significant progress in sanitation. The village has installed 36 toilets, surpassing the national target. This achievement is attributed to the leadership of Chief Macha, who has championed the sanitation campaign.

The impact of this initiative has been substantial. With access to proper sanitation facilities, the health of the community has improved. Diseases related to poor sanitation have declined, and the general wellbeing of the people has increased.

The village's success story is a testament to the effectiveness of the NRSP. Chief Macha's leadership and the active participation of the community have been crucial in achieving this milestone.

The NRSP is a government initiative aimed at improving sanitation in rural areas. It emphasizes the importance of community participation and leadership in achieving sanitation goals.

The success of Macha serves as an inspiration to other communities, highlighting the potential for progress in sanitation when local leaders and communities work together.
